

rally for jobs

 O H I O ***

In the wake of the Gulf oil spill, Congress and the administration are debating proposals—including higher taxes and fees on the oil and natural gas industry—that could cost American jobs, threaten our fragile economic recovery and jeopardize our energy security.

The Ohio Rally for Jobs is an opportunity for both the countless men and women whose livelihoods depend on the oil and natural gas industry and consumers who rely on access to affordable energy to express their concerns about these harmful proposals.

Simply put: more energy equals more jobs, higher incomes and greater economic growth. In light of this fundamental truth, we must let Washington know that we cannot be overlooked. That the current energy proposals will have negative effects on the daily lives of everyday Americans; and that any legislation they support must deliver what the American people want in terms of environmental protection, without sacrificing jobs, economic growth and energy security.

With 15 million people out of work, now is not the time for energy legislation that could hurt the American economy.

Visit the Ohio Rally for Jobs on Sept. 7 to hear from local community leaders, learn more and speak out against proposals that could affect you, your family and your job.
